Returning To Regular Milk In September!

The hot summer months are over so we will begin the delivery of refrigerated milk September 7th. Please call us at 267-0122 to let us know if you enjoyed the way we alternated shelf stable milk and fruit juice this past summer. Your opinions will help us determine what to send next summer.

National Centenarian’s Day

National Centenarian’s Day on September 22nd celebrates those who are 100 years of age or older! Meals on Wheels serves nine people who are 100 or older. Our staff would like to wish them a happy Centenarian’s Day. Please take a few moments on September 22nd to honor anyone you know who has reached 100!

New program: Meal Menu Choice

We will not deliver meals on MONDAY- SEPTEMBER 3rd

You should have received a nonperishable food package on August 29th. Please use it for your meal on the 3rd.
Type I Diabetes Mellitus Nutrition

By Gienna Harrison, RDN, LD

There are two major forms of diabetes, Type I and Type II. First, we’ll focus on Type I diabetes and later we’ll focus on Type II diabetes. Type I diabetes used to be called “insulin-dependent or juvenile onset diabetes.” It occurs when the Beta cells of the pancreas don’t produce or secrete enough of the hormone insulin for the body and this form is usually diagnosed before the age of 15 years. With less insulin, the carbohydrates in the blood cannot be transported inside the cell to be used as energy. This form of diabetes typically shows up around age 12-15 years of age, but can occur at any age. The disease runs in certain families, indicating a genetic link.

The beginning of Type I diabetes is generally associated with decreased release of insulin from the pancreas. As insulin in the blood declines, blood glucose increases (hyperglycemia), especially after eating. When blood glucose levels in the blood become too high for the kidneys to clear, glucose spills over into the urine, giving a sweet smell to the urine.

Symptoms of diabetes include:
1. Excessive thirst
2. Excessive urination
3. Excessive hunger
4. Unexplained weight loss
5. Blurred vision
6. Tingling in hands and feet
7. Frequent infections
8. Poor wound healing
9. Impotence

Diagnosis for diabetes is established with a fasting blood glucose lab test or a hemoglobin (hgb) A1C lab test. A normal level of blood glucose is 70-99mg/dL. Doctors also look for the Hgb A1C level of more than 6.0%. This means the blood cells are coated with more sugar than they are supposed to be. They also look for more than one blood glucose lab that is high on several lab tests. With Type I diabetes, the labs are usually high enough that it’s pretty clear there is diabetes.

Type I diabetes is treated mainly by insulin therapy, either with injections two to six times a day or with an insulin pump. The pump dispenses insulin at a steady rate into the body with more insulin dispensed after a meal. Dietary treatment includes three regular meals and one or more snacks (including one at bedtime) daily. The diet is managed with a carbohydrate (carb) to protein to fat ratio that will match the prescribed insulin level and therefore decrease swings in blood glucose. If one does not eat often enough, the injected insulin can cause severe low blood sugar (hypoglycemia) since there are no carbs there on which the insulin can act.

A diabetic doesn’t have to exclude sugar and carbohydrates in his/her diet, but rather keep them at a steady and reasonable level at a meal or snack. That way the carbs are in balance with the insulin recommended.

Everyone’s blood glucose level increases after a meal, however when insulin is secreted by the pancreas, the blood sugar should decrease to a normal level a couple of hours after a meal. Because a Type I diabetic doesn’t make or release enough insulin, the blood glucose level remains high longer than several hours.

A diabetic typically receives a daily meal plan from a dietitian based on the insulin prescription, the person’s meal schedule, what he likes to eat and what he’s willing to eat. Patient likes are included in the plan. The meal plan includes a certain number of carbohydrates (with a carb being 15 g. of carbohydrate) per meal. The plan gives the patient options as to good choices for meals and snacks.
